He explained the deplorable living conditions of countries with low literacy rates. Literacy exercises a great influence the society. It is proud that India has a very low literacy rate at present. The purpose with which the literacy day was created 5 decades ago has not been served so far. It is the responsibility youth to strive for complete literacy in India.

We should observe and be inspired from the high standards of living and development in countries which achieved complete literacy. Even after 72 years of achieving independence our country has not improved the literacy rate of its people. Lack of literacy leads to backwardness and low living standards. The youth of this nation should be determined and resolute to achieve high literacy rate in the country. The NSS Volunteers should educate illiterate adults in their surroundings.
