REPORT

Career oriented persons are those who value their career as an important piece of their personality. They prioritize their career and job over other parts of their life. This does not mean that they cannot live “Balanced” but simply that they might be more of a “workaholic” than others.

A career orientation is a career development instructional guidance programme designed to prepare students to have a greater understanding of educational career opportunities, options and to assist them in making meaningful and informed career choices.

A part of the orientation process is where a new employee is introduced to co-workers, and is given information such as working hours, place of work, performance standards, benefits and names of the immediate and other offices.

Career development is the life long process of managing learning, work, leisure, and transitions in order to move toward a personality determined and evolving preferred future.

This program was conducted to help B.Com-Logistics Students and Mr. P. Muralidhar was the facilitator.
